Introduction

Starting with data from the 1999 Survey of Household Spending (SHS), the weighting system used for estimations has been revised to reflect household totals from the 1996 Census (instead of the 1991 Census) and to incorporate wages and salaries distributions from taxfiler data from the Canada Revenue Agency (CRA, formerly Revenue Canada). Other smaller changes, outlined below, have also been made to the way in which weights are calculated. Data from previous survey years have been, or will be, revised to reflect this new method, which represents an improvement over the weighting methodology of previous years. This affects not only the SHS and Homeowner Repair and Renovation (HRR) surveys, but also earlier surveys that were replaced by the SHS, namely the Family Expenditure Survey (FAMEX) and the Household Facilities and Equipment (HFE) Survey.

This document will provide an overview of the differences between the old and the new weighting methodologies and the effect of the new weighting system on estimations.

Purpose of survey weights

Survey weights are used to produce estimates from sample surveys. The principle behind the estimation procedure in sample surveys is that each household in the survey represents, in addition to itself, a number of other households. Exactly how many other households are determined by calculating the inverse of the probability of selection. For example, if the probability of selection is 2% then each household represents 1/.02 or 50 households. This number is called the basic survey weight.

This basic weight is further adjusted to reduce the effect of non-response and to correct for coverage errors. During the adjustment for coverage errors, comparisons are made with various estimates from other sources (e.g., the Census or CRA data) and adjustments made to the weights so that final estimates will reflect whatever characteristics the data represent. For example, in the past, adjustments to the weights based on household projections from the 1991 Census ensured that the estimated number of households from the survey matched these projections. The move to projections based on the 1996 Census provides an opportunity to improve the representivity (how well the data represent the situation of the Canadian population) of the survey data.

Projected counts from the 1996 Census for the following subsets of the Canadian population were used to adjust the 1999 survey weights and to revise the weights for the 1998 and 1997 SHS and the 1996 FAMEX:

For the 10 provinces:

- Household size:
  one-person, two-person, more than two-person households
- 9 age groups by sex
- single-parent families
- couples with never-married children

For Yukon and the Northwest Territories:

- Household size:
  one-person, two-person, more than two-person households
- 2 age groups by sex:
  number of persons under 18
  number of persons 18 and over

For Nunavut:

- Total number of households
- 2 age groups by sex:
  number of persons under 18
  number of persons 18 and over

For 14 selected metropolitan areas:

- 2 age groups:
  number of persons under 18
  number of persons over 18

In addition, for the 10 provinces only, counts derived from T4 information from the Canada Revenue Agency (CRA, formerly Revenue Canada) were also used to ensure that the weighted distribution of income (based on wages and salaries) in the data set matched that of the Canadian population.

To summarize, survey weights are necessary to produce estimates from a sample survey that represents the population surveyed. Weights are also used to correct for the non-response of some sampled households and they can be adjusted to allow the data to be more representative of certain segments of the population.

Why reweight?

As stated above, survey weights are necessary to produce estimates from sample surveys. Periodic reweighting based on updated demographic projections can significantly improve these estimates. The major benefits of reweighting with counts from the 1996 Census involve further reduction of coverage errors and enhancement of estimates over and above those based on 1991 Census data. The effectiveness of the coverage adjustment using demographic projections depends largely on the quality of those projections, i.e., how well they represent the survey's target population. For this reason, it is desirable to make use of the most accurate and current demographic information available; the source of which, in this case, is the 1996 Census. Furthermore, the use of CRA T4 information to adjust survey results means that they more accurately reflect the most up to date wages and salaries distribution of the Canadian population. Improving the estimates by using T4 information further enhances the representivity – and thus the quality – of survey data.

How different are the revised estimates from those originally released?

1996 FAMEX (expenditure estimates): For Canada as a whole, 90% of all estimates showed only "small"[1] changes. For most provinces, over 70% of all estimates showed small changes. The exceptions were Newfoundland and Labrador (49%), Nova Scotia (69%), and Prince Edward Island (57%).

1997 SHS (expenditure estimates): For Canada as a whole, 94% of all estimates showed only small changes. For most provinces, over 80% of all estimates showed small changes. The exceptions were Saskatchewan (79%) and Prince Edward Island (72%). In the territories, the percentage of estimates showing only small changes was lower: 63% for the Northwest Territories and 53% in the Yukon. (Data for Nunavut were not tabulated separately. Nunavut officially became a territory of Canada on April 1, 1999.)

1997 SHS (household estimates[2]): For Canada as a whole, 99% of estimates showed only small changes. For six provinces as well as the Yukon, at least 90% of estimates showed only small changes. The remaining provinces and the Northwest Territories showed small changes for between 65% and 88% of estimates.

1998 SHS (expenditure estimates): For Canada overall, 92% of estimates showed only small changes, and in seven of the provinces, 80% or more estimates showed only small changes. Among the remaining three provinces and three territories, the percentage of estimates showing only small changes ranged from 48% to 79%.

1998 SHS (household estimates): For Canada overall, 99% of estimates showed only small changes. Seven provinces had 90% or more of their estimates showing only small changes, and among the remaining provinces and territories, the percentage of estimates showing small changes ranged from 59% to 89%.

It should be noted that estimates that represent a small amount are liable to have higher percentage differences. In these cases, an increase or decrease of only $1 or $2, for example, can represent a large percentage of the original value. For example, in Appendix C, the original value for the average expenditure on boats in Ontario was $4, and the reweighted estimate was $10, resulting in a percentage change of 150%. Although this is a high percentage change, it represents a difference of only a few dollars.

1. In this document, "small" refers to a less than +/-5% difference between the estimates from the old weighting system and those from the new weighting system.
2. "Household estimates" refers to estimates of households with various dwelling characteristics and household equipment.

Also note that, for estimates of the number of households with various dwelling characteristics and household equipment (see Appendices D and E), most of the "large"[3] percentage changes were in the territories where the number of households is small. There were more cases of large percentage changes in 1998 (43 estimates) than in 1997 (7 estimates). In particular, the estimated number of households in Nunavut for 1998 changed by 21% from 5,890 to 7,140. These changes represent a more accurate estimation as a result of the improvements to the weighting system.

Table 1, presents large percentage changes for those estimates that represent high values only.
